ALL ARE WELCOME

Gracious and loving God, we thank you for the gift of our priests. Through them, we experience your presence in the sacraments. Help our priests to be strong in their vocation. Set their souls on fire with love for your people. Grant them the wisdom, understanding, and strength they need to follow in the footsteps of Jesus. Inspire them with the vision of your Kingdom. Give them the words they need to spread the Gospel. Allow them to experience joy in their ministry. Help them to become instruments of your divine grace. We ask this through

Guest Article :

Rev. Jerome Machar OCSO

(Daniel 7:9-10, 13-14, John 1: 47-51)

Today's feast is a challenge for people who have to see to believe and have to touch to comprehend. Being created spirits, angels cannot be heard, touched, or seen. We are so geo-technically oriented that we cannot wrap our brains around anything that lies beyond our empirical world. Not only that, but many people have also stopped believing in God. This makes the whole concept of divine providence irrelevant to many.
I often tell my atheist friends that God does not need their belief in him to exist. The existence of spiritual beings tells us that there are Extraterrestrial Beings, but they are not aliens to our created reality. I guess one could say, it is not they who have to call home, but we. Home is where the heart is. God sends his angels to accompany us along the path that leads to our heavenly home.

Who is the third who walks always beside you?
When I count, there are only you and I together
But when I look ahead up the white road
There is always another one walking beside you
Gliding wrapt in a brown mantle, hooded
I do not know whether a man or a woman
—But who is that on the other side of you?
(T.S. Eliot, The Wasteland)

Today's feast reminds us that we are not orphans and that we have a Father who loves and awaits our homecoming. Robert Frost penned these wonderful words about home. "Home is the place where, when you have to go there, they have to take you in." Keep in mind that our home is in heaven (CF. Phil. 3:20). The celebration of Michael and the angels tells us more about us than about the heavenly host. The scriptures tell us how the angels surround the throne of God. Human beings, however, having been made sons and daughters of God in the Son are near the Father's heart (CF Jn. 1:18). The Psalmist wrestled with this. "When I look at your heavens, the work of your hands… what is man that you are mindful of him… yet you have made him a little lower the angels and crowned him with glory and honor" (Ps. 8: 3, 4, 5). We who are creatures of dust are called to join the heavenly hosts in offering hymns of praise to the Divine Majesty. Through Christ, we commune with the heavenly hosts. In our risen and ascended Lord, things in heaven and things on earth are reconciled and brought together. May all God's works worship him.

"Saint Michael the Archangel, defend us in battle. Be our protection against the wickedness and snares of the devil; May God rebuke him, we humbly pray; And do thou, O Prince of the Heavenly Host, by the power of God, thrust into hell Satan and all evil spirits who wander through the world for the ruin of souls. Amen."

From The Pastor's Desk

Presently we are still awaiting repair for the buildings impacted from the hail storm this past April. It seems timely that we are reading from the Lectionary this week about the storms of life visited upon Job in his loss of most everything of value inclusive of family. His suffering was, in the end, redemptive. Awaiting the restoration and the putting back in order areas of the property. We may also consider the nature and character of our lives in our relationship to the One that we possess through Baptism. The presence of the Lord we hold within ourselves. Possibly this may alert us to that which might need to be restored and reordered within ourselves. How well then do I/we maintain and persevere and sustain in likeness to Jesus? Do we seek to repair and build up His presence within ourselves? As I have appreciated these past weeks houses in repair and the hammering of the crews in the process of restoration, it does provide a kind of impetus or a movement towards self-reparation. We read in 2 Kings 20:1 the words of Isaiah 'Thus says the Lord: put your house in order ... and the response soon after by Hezekiah "O, Lord, remember how faithfully and wholeheartedly I conducted myself in your presence, doing what is pleasing to you.' (there is more to the story in 2 Kings). Ideally it is Jesus who guides and accompanies us and shows us the Way through life. It is also Jesus who leads us and brings us together. The Eucharist is the source of restoration and reordering. The challenge may become not to be alert to certain attitudes and behavior that are not in keeping with HIS WAY and may necessitate a review of life and conduct that need review and repair. May we appreciate how we house the presence of the Lord. May we be on the watch for the kind of reparation that continually restores as individuals and as community.

From Bobbi Bugaj

Anticipating this Sunday as I shared with the members of the 8th grade, we read Philippians 4:6-9, the word "finally" stood out to me. A little background here, I lost my cell phone on Friday. The chariots and horses called "find my phone" kept pointing me in the wrong direction. I overturned my office, car and home. No phone. On Sunday I gave offered it up and got a new one. Due to how I lost my phone I could not recover from a backup. So, I have no history, and the opportunity to look up every number and put it back in my phone and keep forge on? I had "finally" given up. One of the definitions for finally is "After a prolonged time, at the end of a period of time" according to Merriam-Webster online dictionary. And, it was the finally in today's reading that I rejoiced in. It was not that I gave up, it was I looked at my behavior and said the obsession in finding my phone, the trusting something after 24 hours when I knew it was wrong, and then putting it aside and just starting again, was peaceful. I chose to put aside the history that was gone and start again. In doing so, while frustrating it is also beautiful. It puts away the clutter and cuts down the distraction. No name comes up on my phone just the number and I have to retreat everyone as a person to be answered and respected. That is lovely. That is the love that I should show to the world every day, but do I? I think on occasion I choose to control and that inhibits me from seeing the beauty in the world from sunrise to sunset. I will confess here, I believe my choices lost the phone and that is life, but my choice was also to look at my behavior and question what I saw, how I depended on it and how afraid I was that it was gone. I put my phone as integral to my life and its loss asks me to make changes and start again. Finally comes up, because I was allowed to choose to start again or carry on. With Tuesday being the Feast of Saint Michael, Gabriel and Raphael, Archangels, I was reminded of the angels that helped me search for my phone, they appeared and they helped. I thought of God sending them to try and look when I was not there. They were sent by God to help an obsessive and frantic person. While I did not find my phone, the angels opened the door for me to say, finally, it is time to start again. I am peaceful with that decision. I can see that it was a true and just decision and I have a feeling down the road, it will turn up. But I needed maybe just for a moment to put it aside because maybe it has become a distraction and not a tool. Not sure about the last statement as worded, but the truth part is I needed to make an adjustment in my life to see the people and not the phone. The people, they will find me and I will receive them differently. God gives me the freedom to choose, and I chose to walk through the door an angel opened to become a part of this world and not the controller. I am grateful for the insight, I find comfort in the journey and I get to reconnect in this world just a little differently. I am a little lighter, it requires me to acknowledge that the person on the other end of the phone is a person, is the image of God and we both walk together. I finally experience when I put this all aside, the peace of God. Amen
