Guest Article :

by Fr. John Denburger, OCSO

(Isaiah 50: 4 – 7; Ps 22; Phil 2: 6 – 11; Mark 14: 1 -15; 47)

When the Risen Jesus appeared to His disciples at the Sea of Tiberias, He had prepared a meal and afterwards directed His attention to Simon Peter in a very personal way. Three times Jesus questioned him, "Simon, son of John, do you love Me?" In turn, Peter might have questioned Jesus, "Master do You love me?" but he didn't.

But you and I can take up that question, "Jesus, Lord, do You love me?" – we could be bold and even ask three times. And, my brothers and sisters, to our question Jesus does answer. His response encompasses the 119 verses of the Passion we just heard. But let us find His answer to just two verses clearly revelations of His love for you and me, and for all.

In Gethsemane, what Peter, James and John witnessed and heard, St. Mark recounts for us and for all time: "Then He said to them, 'My soul is sorrowful even to death. Remain here and keep watch with Me.' He advanced a little and fell prostrate in prayer, saying, 'My Father, if it is possible, let this cup pass from Me; yet, not as I will, but as You will'."

Jesus reveals what is in His soul; He exposes His vulnerability and it is a sorrow beyond telling – the sorrow of Judas' betrayal, the sorrow of Peter's threefold denial, the sorrow of the rejection and plotting by His own people. He bears an anguish so great that He will sweat blood and it will come to a peak on the cross, "My God, My God, why have You abandoned Me?" This anguish is the darkness of sin, of evil, of infidelities of all people, of us – we can only imagine the weight of it all but even that act only scratches the surface, if that. Do we ever consider what our redemption cost Him?

Yet, "He advanced..." He moved away from the disciples, it seems He had to be alone, anguish can be like this. "He advanced..." despite the sorrow, the anguish He advanced through them, with them to a willing, total sacrifice of Himself for all, for us. So in answer to our question "Jesus, do You love me"

– He can say, "What greater proof do you want or need?" Actions speak louder than words and Jesus' actions are a kind of thunder. So St. Mark presents four advances or movements – Jesus advances through His inner pain to do what the Father wills. Three times He moves to His disciples – like a person in stress who paces back and forth – the Jesus they saw and spoke was not smiling – more than likely they had never seen Him in such a state – but sleep overtook them.

There is one more advance Jesus makes – not recorded in the account – the advance is here and now among us and for us. At the time of Holy Communion we will advance to receive Him in Holy Communion but He will have advanced to you, to me – will have graciously moved to you and me giving Himself totally." Lord, do You love me?" – with faith we literally hold the living answer, the "Yes" in our hands or receive Him into our mouths. Either way – His extravagantly real love, awesome and infinitely merciful, gracious beyond words is yours, is mine. In that moment soon to come, Jesus asks each of us, "What does this extravagant sacrificial love mean to you? What answer do you, do I give?"

FROM THE PASTOR'S DESK

The consequence of our Lenten journey or that which would follow our Lenten sacrifices may be personal to each of us. What might be the outcome of our Lenten fasting and prayer may be a personal question to consider. The ability and opportunity to look closely at our lives as we anticipate the renewal of our own baptismal identity on Easter. Some of us may recall Easter parades and the wearing of new clothes and more than a fashion statement that Lent had been a time of being refashioned in newness of life. The truth be told we can be shaped otherwise. I recall the custom of wearing new clothes at Easter and later learned the implications of being refashioned in likeness to the one who suffered and died and rose from the dead. The Italian "parate" indicates a sending forth and typically into battle. How many of us dismiss the idea that we do battle against the forces of evil daily? The temptation (at times) to forgo certain acts that neglect or are not cared for that might indicate a relationship with Jesus which we profess as a people of faith and hope and love. Perhaps Easter parades and new clothes at Easter has fallen out of practice for many. However, there is the thought (opportunity) perhaps to see the last days of Lent and Holy Week to launder or seek to have washed away that which is not keeping with our baptismal garment. Very close to where my own mother grew up was a convent and near it was a stream near what I would describe as stony ledges. The water flowing down from the mountain hillside and a place where the locals would launder their clothing.

We read in the book of revelation 19 SALVATION, GLORY AND MIGHT BELONG TO OUR GOD FOR TRUE AND JUST ARE HIS JUDGMENTS. And in verse 19 "for the wedding of the lamb has come, her bride has made herself ready. She was allowed to wear a bright, clean linen garment." (The linen represents the righteous deeds of the holy ones) the bride being those who have been purchased with the blood of Jesus. We read later that it also implies those commissioned to communicate His presence. May this Holy Week be a time to attend to that which needs to be cared for as those who have accepted the white garment of baptism. May we be fashioned in His way and life as well.

From Bobbi Bugaj

This week as we approached Palm Sunday and Holy Week, we celebrated the Annunciation of the Lord. On Tuesday evening prayer anticipated the Annunciation and the reading 1 John 1:1-2 states "This life became visible: we have seen and bear witness to it..."). Mary's response "Behold I am a handmaiden of the Lord. May it be done to me according to your word" became enlightening in a way I was not expecting and here is my thought process leading up to it. I was preparing for Palm Sunday. The Gospel reading at the end of Mass was the entrance into Jerusalem. Where he is hailed a King, in a short period of time, he will carry the cross to Golgotha and Mary will be there. It was a wow moment. First because unlike Mary, my reaction to the angel Gabriel could have been something like "ummm, you're kidding me right, I am gonna get in trouble for this." I have always said I want the faith that Mary has and I work toward it but not there yet. I let that thought sink in for a moment then remembering from other Gospel narratives how God gave Mary the help she needed in the angel appearing to Joseph and telling him, it is ok to marry Mary. Mary's ability to trust God stopped me because I ask the question "do I trust God?" That took me to the garden of Gethsemane and what happened there. Not a whole lot of trust, faith and strength. It was a little confusing for a bit, and maybe a little Bobbi Bashing and why Bobbi Land is not where I want to be then I went back to Mary's yes. I thought of her standing at the foot of the cross and how much faith and heartache she must have had. It brought me back to my own Lenten Journey. I see Mary's faith to say "yes" as the beginning of another different faith journey. Her yes stands out for me because I find myself having to say yes to my journey every day. I ponder what it looks like to walk in faith that takes you from Gabriel to the foot of the cross and beyond. This thought, this hope, the nudge of faith that says I too can journey in faith brings a smile and peace. I meditate on the fact that this year, the Annunciation of the Lord came at a time that I was ready to look at my faith, hold it up to Mary's yes and think, I can do this. My yes has to be every day and my participation must be complete. I too can be a handmaid of the Lord. I am a servant of the Lord. I walk, I stumble, I ask forgiveness but I always follow in the footsteps of Jesus. I look at my short comings and keep trying. I cannot see or feel how Mary felt from Annunciation to the Cross, but I can put one foot in front of the other and stand there in faith. It is not perfect faith but a faith that gets stronger every step. A faith that continues to grow because I work on my shortcomings and God's forgiveness and mercy is divine. Lent gives me a journey to walk in the footsteps of Jesus and the thought of what true faith, the faith that says I am of servant of God could be. I love lent.
