Guest Article :

Rev. Jerome Machar OCSO

(Ephesians 1: 11-14, Luke 12:1-7)

"When I am gone, always be reminded that whenever you stand for your truth, you will be keeping my voice and the voices of our nations and our people alive" (Sacheen, Littlefeather; Breaking the Silence). In 1973, Littlefeather was the first Native American to appear at the Academy Awards when Marlon Brando asked her to refuse the Oscar on his behalf. The drama of that evening highlighted the necessity of living by and for moral values. As members of the Body of Christ, we are sacramental people. Our words and actions should signify divine truth. Through baptism, we have been made children of God and heirs of the Kingdom. Through our forebears in the faith, God has passed on to us the mystery of his sovereign will and the grace of redemption. Through the mystery of the Incarnation, the Word of God took flesh and became tangible. By the movement of the Holy Spirit, God has called us to make the Saving Word living and active in our day. Our response to this call will be countercultural because, as the Lord said, "My thoughts are nothing like your thoughts, and your ways are not like my ways: (Is. 55:8).

By the outpouring of the Holy Spirit, God has united all the members of the human race in His Beloved Son. Gazing upon us with the eyes of mercy, God has recreated us. The creator and sustainer of the universe has entrusted to us the care of all that he has made. It is here that we stand in opposition to a consumer-minded society. Recall this cautionary note from Saint Paul. "What do you have that you did not receive? And if you did receive it, why do you boast as though it were not a gift?" (1 Cor. 4:7). Saint Matthew records Jesus's command. "What you have received as a gift, give as a gift" (Mat. 10: 8). This command is expanded in another passage. "You wicked servant. I forgave your whole debt because you pleaded with me. Shouldn't you have been generous towards your fellow servant, as I dealt generously with you?" (Mat. 18:32-33) He who dispenses his blessings according to his good pleasure expects us to be generous to those in need. This is why we were made, to be our brothers' and sisters' keepers and helpers. We who have received mercy upon mercy because of God's infinite patience with us are called to be fountains of love and compassion for all the members of the human race, especially the poor and marginalized. The Lord gave us an example when he emptied himself to fill us up. Every time we pour ourselves out in the service of others we manifest God's superabundant loving-kindness to us.

These days there are many sad and distressing things happening. But even amid hardship and pain, we can be agents of love and compassion. We must not be afraid to testify to the immensity of God's love for all people. It's as easy as reaching out a hand to do good, showing the love of Christ, drying a tear bringing comfort to the lonely, showing the way to one who is lost, consoling the broken-hearted, helping the fallen, teaching those looking for the truth, or offering an erring soul a fresh start. By learning to place the blessings God has given us at the service of others we can provide for the needs of the poor and help heal our wounded humanity. Littlefeather, who died October 2, 2022, concluded her remarks on that night in 1973 with these beautiful words. "I beg at this time that I have not intruded upon this evening and that we will in the future, our hearts and our understandings will meet with love and generosity."

From The Pastor's Desk

I was reminded of a classmate of mine on listening to a poem this past week. It seems to be something of a common experience for some who are advancing in time and age, I have come to appreciate. The poem by one Louis Jenkins 'It's So Easy To Lose Track of Things." It continues with wandering from room to room and arriving at a sense of forgetfulness at what it was he was looking for in the first place. My classmate shared 'I go into a room and forgot why I went in'. Some would say it is an argument for decluttering that which sometimes we need to let go of relative to what piles up not only in our residences but also that which creates disorder and distraction in our day to day activity. Keeping track of things might also call for the direction of being on track with the course of life given by Jesus. Follow me. That would be an invitation. It is, as well, a summons and a challenge. In John we read of the two individuals who (this being after Jesus is baptized by the Baptist) are questioned by Jesus What are you looking for? (John 1:38). I have read that this is the beginning of His ministry. The response of the two was a question 'where are you staying?' Jesus's response 'Come, and you will see.' It occurs to me that each time we enter into church we may be distracted by many things. Perhaps our minds drawn in different directions. That might indicate a need to focus as to why we (myself included) sometimes may need be conscious and aware of our preparation for our celebration. It is not only a question of fasting prior to our reception of the Body and Blood but also a continual response to the invitation and summons and challenge to follow in His way and truth and life. That would come from John 14:6 I AM THE WAY AND THE TRUTH AND THE LIFE. Matthew also give us a bit more individual direction apart from our presence in the space of the church building. In Matthew 6:6 "But when you pray , go to your inner room, close the door, and pray to your Father in secret." what follows is the prayer the Our Father. I suppose it is just a thought about attentiveness and being decluttered from the kind of distractions that impede our progress His way and truth and His life.

From Bobbi Bugaj

This last Monday evening I shared thoughts over the Beatitudes in this Sunday's readings. We talked about a few things. I asked them to write down what three of those "Blessed" stood out to them. It was, I will admit, all over the board and we talked about what scripture they meant to them and their life. I took that thought home with me for a deep dive on my life. "Blessed" as defined by the online dictionary was "made holy; consecrated." I paused for a moment because having been taught that I should do this, the question becomes, do I. The list has 9 Blessed and then ends with "Rejoice and be glad, for your reward will be great in heaven." In my life I have noticed that small parts of heaven have appeared in my life when practicing these things. For example, every time that I have said, even grudgingly (murmur murmur) that I would follow the Lord when I really wanted more control of a situation, I have received in blessings outcomes that have brought comfort, healing and peace. The outcome of this situation was that it was good for everyone involved. The outcome in God's hands not mine was holy and I was changed. I can recount every one of them when I sit in prayer and list my gratitude (that I do not do enough) to God. God's outcomes always change my heart in a profound way. The acknowledgement of these blessings changes me. When I ponder "meek" I immediately think of humility, patience and gentleness. I am not always these things. I like "t" crossed and "i"'s dotted. I have learned over time and continue to learn that God is God and I am not. I know for a fact in my life, that all that is good and beautiful comes from Him and when I put my needs aside and let the Spirit lead, the world is a beautiful perfect place for what is happening. (Make's you wonder after 68 years why I still struggle at times to do this.) One thing I learned about mercy is that when I have shown it to someone, it comes back to me in graces far greater than I anything I have done. I noticed that early in life. Showing mercy and receiving mercy is a circular motion that brings the light of Christ into the world. I do fully understand "hunger and thirst for righteousness" and I do think that it is a lifelong, reaching out in to the world. I feel deeply my heart's desire that keeps me drawn to my faith and wants to change everything wrong in my life because of the love of God and all the blessings that I have received from it. I have come to the realization that God blesses me every single day with his love. It comes in the strength that says "Bobbi, whether you like it or not, this is the right decision, and I will walk it with you." Think of Footsteps in the Sand, "that is where I carried you." So, I try to make the Beatitudes part of my life, they tell me: "hey, stop, sit and listen" and it is in the stop and listening that I find the blessings and graces I missed sometimes. I am admitting that I always, joyfully walk down this path pondering how I keep the Beatitudes and whether I am succeeding or not. But I know that it is in the keeping of them, that I am blessed.
