Rev. Jerome Machar OCSO

(Daniel 7:9-10, 13-14, John 1: 47-51)

Today's feast is a challenge for people who have to see to believe and have to touch to comprehend. Being created spirits, angels cannot be heard, touched, or seen. We are so geo-technically oriented that we cannot wrap our brains around anything that lies beyond our empirical world. Not only that, but many people have also stopped believing in God. This makes the whole concept of divine providence irrelevant to many. I often tell my atheist friends that God does not need their belief in him to exist. The existence of spiritual beings tells us that there are Extraterrestrial Beings, but they are not aliens to our created reality. I guess one could say, it is not they who have to call home, but we. Home is where the heart is. God sends his angels to accompany us along the path that leads to our heavenly home.

Who is the third who walks always beside you?
When I count, there are only you and I together
But when I look ahead up the white road
There is always another one walking beside you
Gliding wrapt in a brown mantle, hooded
I do not know whether a man or a woman
—But who is that on the other side of you?
(T.S. Eliot, The Wasteland)

Today's feast reminds us that we are not orphans and that we have a Father who loves and awaits our homecoming. Robert Frost penned these wonderful words about home. "Home is the place where, when you have to go there, they have to take you in." Keep in mind that our home is in heaven (CF. Phil. 3:20). The celebration of Michael and the angels tells us more about us than about the heavenly host. The scriptures tell us how the angels surround the throne of God. Human beings, however, having been made sons and daughters of God in the Son are near the Father's heart (CF Jn. 1:18). The Psalmist wrestled with this. "When I look at your heavens, the work of your hands... what is man that you are mindful of him... yet you have made him a little lower the angels and crowned him with glory and honor" (Ps. 8: 3, 4, 5). We who are creatures of dust are called to join the heavenly hosts in offering hymns of praise to the Divine Majesty. Through Christ, we commune with the heavenly hosts. In our risen and ascended Lord, things in heaven and things on earth are reconciled and brought together. May all God's works worship him.

"Saint Michael the Archangel, defend us in battle. Be our protection against the wickedness and snares of the devil; May God rebuke him, we humbly pray; And do thou, O Prince of the Heavenly Host, by the power of God, thrust into hell Satan and all evil spirits who wander through the world for the ruin of souls. Amen."

FROM THE PASTOR'S DESK

The first day of autumn was this past Tuesday. The fall equinox being the point at which the sun crosses the earth's equator and so making day and night of equal length everywhere. I have read that "harvest" was the name for the season until the word "autumn" began to displace it. Appreciating the waning of summer as well as change of color and the shedding of leaves that some of us have noted already. I noticed it earlier while driving towards the metro park and the change in the foliage. The word "autumnal" gives me pause to consider how we may be attentive to and examine the direction of maturing into final growth. The process of the development into likeness to Jesus. The descent of the leaves falling to the ground as many of us speak of the season of Fall we may appreciate the theological sense of Adam and Eve succumbing to temptation and so the fall. The divine reversal through Jesus restored us to likeness and image through Baptism. That give me the thought as to how I/we might consider that which may be harvested through our growth in image and likeness to Jesus Himself. The process of maturing in growth and development in His Way and Life and Truth. (John14:6). With seasonal change and leaves that were green starting to turn red, orange and yellow and await new growth with more sun light in the change of seasons. We too may seek to shed certain habits and practices as we await the return of the Son who is the Light of the World. The time of harvesting is also a time of sharing. Many are grateful for the sharing of the produce from gardens (not only the space behind the school) connected to our homes. May we seek to share the produce of the relationship we have with Jesus in the Eucharist. May we as well be conscious of what may need be shed to offer deeper growth in the tree of life as we recall the late Pope Benedict XVI who said 'the cross is the true of life' as well Saint Albert the Great who taught that the Eucharist, the body and blood of Christ, is the fruit of the tree of life.

From Bobbi Bugaj

In Tuesday's evening prayer there was a line in Psalm 20, that gives me pause and a sense of gratitude. The line is "May the Lord answer in times of trial, May the name of Jacob's God protect you." The reading from 1 John 23:1-3 reads: See what love the Father has bestowed on us that we may be called children of God." With these two together I always ask myself "Do I know Him and what does or should that reveal about me?" Then I remember just a few of the graces that I have received. The laughter that comes with pain, and the hope and joy that I found because of it. See, even when I struggle I know that God loves me just as I am, in the place that I stand, giving me the strength because God has kept his promise and I have willingly and chosen to trust and love him. At every Sunday Mass, I repeat the Creed with the first lines "I believe..." that means something to me because it also states what I do not believe. I have meditated on the "not believe" mostly because I do not want the words to the Creed to become mechanical or habitual. I want them to always mean something and I have found, that sometimes, looking at the opposite side can be very stark and revealing. "I believe in one God," first line of the Creed and then I pause to ask the question, "Do I" because sometimes I can get caught up in trying to control a situation where I have none. Back to Psalm 20, God does protect me (smile here) maybe in spite of myself, and in turn, I do try to be like Him. God talks to me as I am in prayer, Eucharist, Confession, and I acknowledge that I am a sinner. I also acknowledge at Sunday Mass in the Confiteor that maybe this week, I might not have been the best image of God I could be "in my thoughts and in my words, in what I have done and what I have failed to do." This acknowledgement also acknowledges my strength to do better, that I find comfort in forgiveness and compassion, that mercy can have a new meaning as I struggle to return to the path of love. Over the years this journey has become easier as I find new meaning in the words of Jesus Christ. Parables have insights I have chosen to (uncomfortably) acknowledge and in doing so, changed my heart and changed my actions. I have pondered on Jesus healing a man and the healing I have found walking out of Confession. In the words, "May the name of Jacob's God protect you" reminds me all the times God has protected me, as I choose every day to walk with Him in my heart. I always say that God loves me as I am, in any moment of any day. God also asked that I continue to become his image and I have chosen to listen. Not always easy but today there is joy, there is happiness because there is love. God asks me everyday to choose Him and I do. Sometimes I fail, and I am sorry. But it is the love and pure beauty of this journey that keeps me on it. This journey has increased my faith and my trust gets stronger every day. Somethings in life I can not control and I can not make better but in all of this I believe with every breath, that I am loved and I am a child of God.
